WiEnergy - Energy Auditing, Consultancy & Monitoring Services

INTRODUCTION

Carrying out an energy review is the first step for energy management. The energy audit is the starting point from which an energy review can be carried out and thus a rational energy management programme may be developed. It helps to quantify the energy usage at a site and highlights areas for potential savings and gives the data from which performance indicators can be derived.

An energy audit is essentially a study to determine the amount and cost of energy consumed and to identify opportunities for potential savings. This is achieved by carrying out a technical investigation of the control and flow of energy in the plant or a process, or even a specific piece of equipment.

OBJECTIVES

An energy audit helps to identify where and how energy savings can be achieved. Energy audits can be undertaken for the whole site, for a particular process or item of equipment. Whatever the subject of the audit, the objectives of the survey remain the same.

The objectives of the energy audit are to:

- 1) Quantify energy consumption for audit scope (site, area or item of equipment)
- 2) Identify practical energy saving projects.
- 3) Quantify savings in energy and monetary terms.
